The North American Legacy (Founded in New Westminster, February 7. 2006)

We are a society of environmental activists engaged in recovering the green cover that trees and edible plants supply to the earth. The world is changing rapidly with new technologies, materials, and systems that have lesser impact in the environment, but we think we can do even better. Join us and become a member of a group that plans to work locally to serve the community.

In many places the environment is suffering changes from lawns full of ornamental plants to forests that are being used for logging. Some communities are struggling to keep organic products as part of their traditions, and municipal government are hardly coping with waste management and disposal of materials that can't find a use or a location for disposal. We are at the verge of a change in the way we plan the use of the natural and non-natural resources making them sustainable. The North American Legacy Foundation supports actions that contribute to recover traditions from farming to being sustainable using natural resources in general.

Many brilliant ideas that have been cooking at universities and technical institutes are still to be integrated into the functional arms of the community. A very well educated work force is ready to implement these changes by turning them into actions. Some of these individuals and companies require immediate support, let's give them a hand!

Our Vision and Mission

We want to contribute to improve the world we live in by supporting actions that help make the environment sustainable. We want to be there for those working towards these goals and for those acquiring the skills to help the environment.

Our Mission is to deliver this message through events, forums, training sessions and conventions where individuals can meet with experts to express their ideas and proposals to reach the goals. We believe that this is the way to get closer and all together confront the challenges to reach this vision.

Be part of our series of events and let your message get to the audience. Support us and our events. We offer you visibility at all the events and communication material as well as recognition for the donations and assistance received.
